|----------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Today I Learned           | Today, I learned about Human-in-the-Loop AI and why humans should remain in control of sensitive AI decisions instead of allowing AI to automatically perform consequential actions.                                                      |
| Today I Built / Practiced | Added a human approval stage to an existing AI customer-support workflow, allowing a human to approve or reject the AI's recommendation before the final action.                                                                          |
| Technologies / Tools Used | n8n, AI Agent / AI Analysis, Wait Node, Human Approval, Conditional Logic                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Problem(s) Faced          | Had to understand how to pause the workflow and wait for a human decision before continuing.                                                                                                                                              |
| How I Solved Them         | Added an approval stage that pauses the workflow and resumes only after the human approves or rejects the AI recommendation.                                                                                                              |
| Task Status               | Completed                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
